Devon Coast to Coast Map

General Introduction

The Devon Coast to Coast walk runs between Wembury on the South Devon coast and Lynmouth on the North Devon coast, passing through two National Parks. It is approximately 187km/117miles long if the route is strictly followed, but in some places there are good or bad weather alternatives and it is unlikely that you will be able to resist diversions to visit places of interest nearby. So be prepared for a somewhat longer walk. Take it slowly and enjoy yourself.

The terrain is varied with stretches of open moor, deep wooded river valleys, green lanes and minor roads. Much of the route is hilly, so the distances you plan to walk must take this into account. Though an active Rambler may be able to complete the walk in a few days, the majority will need longer, even a full fortnight, especially if the richness of the countryside, its antiquities, churches and many other historic buildings, as well as its panoramic views, are all to be appreciated.
